Summer Drowning Prevention: What Georgia Families Should Know

Summer in Georgia means more time at the pool, on the lake, and enjoying weekends with family and friends. Unfortunately, it is also the time of year when drowning accidents increase. According to the National Drowning Prevention Alliance, drowning can happen in seconds and often without the splashing or cries for help many people expect.

Children are especially vulnerable, but drowning incidents can affect people of all ages. Whether you are spending time at a neighborhood pool, visiting Lake Lanier, or enjoying a beach vacation, taking water safety seriously can help prevent tragedies.

Experts recommend using multiple layers of protection rather than relying on a single precaution. Constant, active supervision is essential whenever children are near water. Fences and self-latching gates around pools provide another important safeguard, while swim lessons and water competency skills can help both children and adults feel more confident in and around the water. Life jackets should always be worn when appropriate, especially while boating or participating in water sports.

Emergency preparedness is equally important. Knowing CPR and having a plan in place can make a critical difference if an accident occurs.

Awareness and prevention save lives, and many drowning incidents are entirely preventable.

U.S. Supreme Court Decision Expands Accountability in Trucking Cases

A recent decision from the United States Supreme Court could have important implications for victims injured in commercial truck accidents.

In Montgomery v. Caribe Transport II, LLC, the Court unanimously held that certain negligent hiring claims against freight brokers are not barred by federal law when those claims involve motor vehicle safety. The ruling may allow injured individuals and families to pursue accountability when brokers choose unsafe trucking companies that later cause serious crashes.

The decision represents a significant development in trucking litigation and could affect future personal injury and wrongful death cases involving commercial vehicles.

Fourth of July Safety: Reducing Preventable Holiday Injuries

The Fourth of July is one of the busiest—and potentially most dangerous—times of the summer. Increased highway travel, crowded lakes, fireworks displays, and holiday celebrations can all contribute to a rise in serious accidents and injuries.

Families can help reduce risk by planning ahead, avoiding impaired driving, supervising children closely around water, and using fireworks responsibly. A little extra caution can go a long way toward keeping the holiday enjoyable for everyone.

Recognizing where the risks are is often the first step toward preventing injuries before they happen.
